

OFFICE MARKET OVERVIEW

MACYN SCHOLZ, Director of Research

After hiking the policy interest rate in July to 5% and holding in September, another increase is possible from the Bank of Canada as inflation rose this quarter to 4%. Vacancy in Vancouver inched up again, reaching 12% in the downtown core. However, Vancouver remains much tighter than other major office markets in North America. This quarter, Amazon welcomed the first employees to the Post's South Tower. The Post is touted as the largest office building in Metro Vancouver, thus the occupation of it in this market is significant. Average lease rates ticked up in Q3, demonstrating that despite vacant inventory being up, landlords are reluctant to decrease rents and will often give concessions elsewhere.
